Mr. D'Aubuisson, a former major in the National Guard and an extreme rightist, held a clandestine news conference on Tuesday urging a rightist coup and suggesting that the coup might be imminent. He has twice been suspected previously of trying to engineer coups.

In San Salvador, Washington
Post correspondent Christopher Dickey reported that Mr. Duarte said that Mr. D'Aubuisson would be arrested if he could be found. Mr. Dickey also reported that U.S. Ambassador Frederie L. Chapin had denounced the attack by unidentified gunmen Wednesday on the U.S. embassy, which broke a window but caused no injuries.

"This [shooting] incident has all the hallmarks of a D'Aubuisson operation," Mr. Chapin said. "Let me state to you that we oppose coups and we have no intention of being intimidated."

Among Reagan administration officials with whom Mr. D'Aubuisson said he had meetings was Roger Fontsine, now Latin American affairs specialist on the National Security Council staff. Mr. Haig said that Mr. Fontaine's last meeting with Mr. D'Aubuisson had taken place more than a year before President Reagan took office.

On the subject of a coup, Mr. statements made by the major regarding his views on the Salva-doran government are pure fiction. He said that he never stated or implied anything of the sort to any-one, anywhere, at any time, ca-tegorically denying the major's Another denial came from State Department spokesman William J. ess, who said. "There is nothing the president has said, the secretary of state has said, publicly or privately, or any official of this government has said that would warrant reaching that [Mr. D'Au-buisson's] conclusion."

At the same time, Mr. Dyess refused to reply directly to ques-tions about whether the United States would oppose a coup. While saying that the United States was opposed in principle to military takeovers, he insisted that his answer should not be applied to any particular situation.

The administration has become increasingly sensitive to sugges-tions that it views the Salvadoran civil war primarily in terms of the East-West conflict and that its zeal in combating Communist-bloc support for Salvadoran leftist insurgents is greater than its concern rightist factions in that conflict.

Poland Detains Dissident, Stirs Union Concern

By Brian Mooney

WARSAW - Poland's leading dissident, Jacek Kuron, was de-tained Thursday and told he was being investigated on charges that carry a maximum jail sentence of eight years. In response, the Soli-darity free trade union summoned its national leaders for an emergency meeting.

The detention of Mr. Kuron. leader of the Self-Defense Committee (KOR) and one of Solidarity's key advisers, followed a tough Soviet statement on Poland. The Kremlin leadership, referring to the need for a "radical healing" of the Polish situation, said it was convinced that Poland's Commu-nist rulers had the ability and resources to "reverse the course of events."

[In Washington, the State De-partment expressed renewed concern Thursday about the possibility of Soviet military intervention, the Associated Press reported. Officials said the Moscow statement apparently was a reaffirmation of the doctrine which Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev used to justify the Soviet invasioo of Czechoslovakia in 1968. The doctrine holds that neighboring Communist countries have the right to intervene by force to safeguard Communism in any Eastern European state.

[For the first time in several weeks, the administration renewed public warnings of "grave conse-quences" for East-West relations if the Russians intervened in Poland. "Poland should be free to solve its own problems without any outside interference," State Department spokesman William Dyess said.] Mr. Kuron was held for six hours and informed by a state prosecutor that he was being investiand demeaning the Polish state, Communist system and leaders: He was instructed to report twice a week to his local police station in Zoliborz, northern Warsaw.

Solidarity, which has warned that such moves could threaten the 90-day strike truce, announced a meeting of its decision-making national consultative committee in Warsaw for Saturday.

Role in Solidarity

KOR, set up in 1976 by dissident intellectuals to defend and promote workers' causes, played an important role in the strike ent last summer that resulted in the birth of Solidarity, Eastern Europe's only free trade union movement. Solidarity has since pledged to defend KOR activists.

Further cracks appeared in the fragile union-government truce Thursday with workers in a second big city threatening possible strike action and a protest announced for Friday in the town of Siedice, east

The second section, the only part in the form of a joint Soviet-Polish declaration, said that imperialism and international reactionary forces" were hoping the crisis in Poland would lead to a change in the alignment of forces in the world, but that "the Socialist community is iodissovable" and that its defense was a matter for Hidden Economy': Safety Valve for West?

Recession Modifies Official Attitude on Moonlighting

By Axel Krause Insernational Herold Tribion

PARIS - The "black economy" of Western industrialized nations the wage earning activities that are concealed from government taxation - is still flourishing despite a crippling recession.

And according to fresh thinking among goverament planners and economists in Western Europe, the practice provides a handy if illegal safety valve that should be tolerated - at least until the official economy is back on the road to recovery.

Moonlighting or fiddling — called Schwarzarbeit in West Germany, travail au noir in France and Belgium and lavoro nero in Italy—has been the object of a crackdown in Europe during the past few years. But officials interviewed recently said that the campaign had not proven very effective. "Because it is hidden, the clandestine economy remains difficult to evaluate, but we are convinced it is growing rapidly and continu-ously in most of the industrialized market economy countries," said Raffaele De Grazia, a staff member of the International Labor Office in Geneva.

In an internal background paper, OECD de-fines this economy to include all "productive activities that are quite legal in themselves, but which are illegally concealed from the public authorities to avoid taxes and similar charges."

OECD countries planned for early June at the sgency's Paris headquarters.

The number of workers in the black economy - earning undeclared and thus untaxed and unmeasured income - now equals and may already exceed the number of onemployed, according to Mr. De Grazia and other government officials, planners and economists. The number of jobless in North America. Western Europe and Japan has swelled to more than 23 million and by mid-1982 the total will exceed 25.5 million, equal to 7.5 percent of the area's combined labor force, according to OFCD.

The ILO survey covering the United States, Europe and Japan concluded that in this enviroument the immediate effects of the underground economy may be healthy, producing welcome, if illegal, fallout for governments.

"In the present climate of crisis and memployment, the fact that workers have the possibility of working in the underground economy can act as a safety valve for discontent and social tensions," Mr. De Grazia said. He noted that that many of those in the black economy are also registered as unemployed, often drawing jobless benefits - illegally, of

An official of the European Economic Community in Brussels said that during the past two years, member governments, notably France, Belgium and Britain, have moved to crack down on illegal labor, notably in small businesses and trades, mainly by imposing fines on violators.

ticularly effective nor do government poli-cymakers appear determined to push enforce-ment very hard to the immediate future, officials and economists said.

Current Mood

"There is continuing talk of crackdowns on black labor in the EEC and Scandinavia. But as in Communist, Eastern European countries, twilight earnings provide workers and employers relief from recession and inflexibilities in the labor laws which outlaw such work that is why there is so little action," the EEC official said. Reflecting much of the current mood in En-rope, a recent poll showed that in France only 22 percent of the population is resolutely op-posed to illegal holding of jobs. Growing unemployment is already an issue in the presidential election campaign, but "we do not expect the travail au noir issue to be raised," a French official said. Meantime, however, a large body of budget and tax officials in Western nations rem fearful that the black economy is depriving governments of billions of dollars in badly needed revenues to finance growing and often deficit-ridden social services and public works. Government economists also said that its very existence is creating major distortions in national accounting procedures, where report-ing accuracy is crucial for successful economic The latter problem is being closely examined

America's Evangelicals: More Zionist Than Zionists

By William Claiborne

Washington Post Service
JERUSALEM — Estimated at 40 million members and embracing Abraham's Covenant as fervently as the most impassioned Zionists, the burgeoning Evangelical Christian movement in the United States is fast becoming one of Israel's most potent allies in its conflict with the Arab world.

They range in ideology from political moderates who simply view Israel as an underdog in a lopsided struggle for survival, to infatuated rightists who are convinced that the Jewish state will play the central role in that final, apocalyptical chapter of history that chimaxes with the Second Coming of

Some of them make pilgrimages to the Holy Land and pay homage to the leaders of Prime Min-ister Menachem Begin's government as adoxingly as they visit the shrines along the Via Dolorosa, v Jesus is believed to have walked to his crucifiction. They issue warnings with beatific certainty that a great conflagration with the Soviet Union in the Middle East is a biblical prophecy, but promise that the United States will come to Israel's rescue.

But most of them stay at home, offering in in-creasing dimensions moral and financial support to their recently found cause. Cariously, their numbers include some acknowledged anti-Semites, but those that are somehow see that prejudice as being unconnected to the defense of Israel against the more insidious threat of godless Communism.

. Christian Kibbutzim

In a dramatic expression of the growing Chris-tian Zionist phenomenom, the most dedicated of the believers move here with their families, estab-lishing small Christian kibbutzim, where they live and wait for the Messiah Others spend summers here and then travel and lecture abroad in support

But the ones who are Israel's most valuable asset are those who have organized pro-Israel movements outside their formal churches and denominations. Obviously well-funded, they are producing slick brochures and expertly scripted documentary films on Israel's behalf. Their proselytism goes over the airwaves of 1,300 Evangelical radio stations and Christian Broadcasting Network television, as well as by way of such growing organizations as the Campus Crusade for Christ. "For these people, the Bible is a political guide to Foreign Ministry officials involved in Israel's hasbara, or foreign information effort, pointed out that while there is some liaison between pro-Israeli Evangelical activists and such groups as the Ameri-can Israel Public Affairs Committee and the American Jewish Committee, the Israeli lobby in the United States tends to leave the Christian groups to promote their cause without Israeli help.

For years, the movement has embraced domestic issues such as legislation against pornography, op-their activities. They understand that the land of Israel was promised by God to Abraham. They have no problem with the [occupied] West Bank. There's no question in their minds that the Bible is accurate in its geographical and historical descrip-tion of the Jews right to the Land of fsrael," said Zeev Chafets, director of Israel's Government Press Office. "Not only do they support Israel, but they particularly support Begin and the Likud government. How could we be displeased with that kind of friendship?," he added.

Israeli officials are keenly aware of the growing Evangelical movement in the United States, which according to public opinioo analyst George Gallup, includes one to three Americans who acknowledge having been "born again," and 38 percent of the nation that believes the Bible is the actual word of God and should be taken literally.

An aide to Mr. Begin said that the Evangelicals "are a pillar that Israel has in the United States. They number 10 times the Jews in America, and they are outspoken. Naturally, we look kindly on what they are doing."

position to the Equal Rights Amendment, anti-abortion laws, U.S. aid to parochial schools, proyers in classrooms and anti-gay rights. It is only relatively recently that Fundamentalist Christians in the United States have collectively directed their attention abroad, and the only major nondomestic issue that appears to have taken hold is the Israeli-Arab conflict.

Committed to Israel

The alliance is all the more surprising because, traditionally, Israel — indeed, the Zionist movement — had strong ties with the labor movement and the northern liberal establishment, which includes many Jews. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of the Moral Majority, saved his most stinging criti-cism during a recent visit to Israel for liberal Chris-tians, particularly those leading the National Council of Churches.

Mr. Falwell, to whom Mr. Begin last year presented a prestigious award commemorating the Re-visionist Zionist, Zeev Jahotinsky, condemned the the council for criticizing Israel's settlement policy, and said that millions of Evangelicals in the United States were committed to Israel's position against a Palestinian state in the West Bank.

Some Evangelical leaders deny that the movement is particularly disposed to the Likud government's rightist policies, although Dr. Larry Sammels, an American medical professor at Hadassah spital here said that he once told Mr. Begin You know, I think you have more supporters among Evangelical Christians in North America than you have Jews supporting Israel."

Dr. George Giacumakis, director of the American Institute of Holy Land Studies here, said in an interview, "Overall, we're sympathetic with the existence of Israel and would consider ourselves as an institution a friend of Israel, hut we are not identified with the Likud, specifically, or the Labor Par-

Run for Their Money

"Personally, I interpret the scriptures as teaching that there is a covenant between God and the peo-ple [of Israel] in relation to this land ... Most evan-gelicals would accept that," he said.

Dr. Giacumakis added: "As the Palestinians have become more noticeable in the United States, and the public relations machines for the Palestinian cause have increased over the years with Arab money, that has brought some divisions in the church to the point where they are ... giving Israel a run for their money."

Dr. Giacumakis is board chairman of a new or-mization here called The International Christian Embassy, which was formed "to show concern for the Jewish people, and particularly for the reborn state of Israel."

Israeli official say that they welcome Christian pport regardless of its results, hus that the principal question is how it will be translated into practical terms — lobbying and other forms of pressure — and what effects it will have on the policies of the Reagan administration.

Bani-Sadr Reaffirms Conditions for Peace

TEHRAN - President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Thursday that a cease-fire and a withorawal of Iraqi troops must be simultaneous and immediate under any peace agreement with Iraq.

Speaking to about 100,000 peo-ple at a rally at Tehran University, he appeared to reject the terms proposed by a high-level Islamic mission seeking an end to the 5-month-old war. "We will not ac-cept a solution that does not provide for punishment of the aggressor." the president said. The rally marked the 14th anniversary of the death of nationalist Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

The Islamic delegation, which was formed during the Islamic summit meeting in Saudi Arabia in January, proposed a cease-fire on March 12 and an Iraqi withdrawal from Iranian territory starting on March 29, to be completed within four weeks. Negotiations on Iranian-Irani disputes would begin after the withdrawal if both sides agreed that an Islamic force would maintain peace and ensure free navigation on the disputed Shatt-al-Arab

The Kuwaiti ruler. Emir Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, announced his approval of the new Cabinet Wednesday. The previous government resigned Feb. 24 following the election of a 50-seat Kuwaiti parliament.

The elections marked the return of democratic life to Kuwait. The previous assembly was dissolved by the emir in 1976 during the turmoil generated by the Lebanese civil war.

The number of ministers was trimmed by three in compliance with the constitutional requirement that the total number of ministers be less than one-third of parliament.

The three points - the withdrawal of Iraoi forces, adherence to the 1975 accord and condemnation of the aggressor - were identical to those proposed by Mr. Bani-Sadr and other Iranian leaders when the mission arrived in Tehran a week ago. Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montezari said in a message to the Supreme Delense Council, which plans fran's war strategy.

Chad-Watching: Bored Agents in Cameroon Banter Time Away By Gregory Jaynes

New York Times Service KOUSSERI, Cameroon - The bored foreign agents are to be found each starry night on the dirt veranda of the Relais du Logone, the one hotel in town. Intensely Curious

These people are in Kousseri because the countries they represent are intensely curious about the situation in Chad. Two months ago, Libya stopped a war there by committing its troops to the side of President Goukouni Oueddei. Now Libyan troops hold the capital as well as much of northern Chad. Libya has oil, an unpredictable leader.

Col. Moamer Oadhafi, and known designs on neighboring countries. There is speculation also that the Soviet Union has a stake in the Chad affair, just as it has a stake in Col. Oadhafi's dream of a pan-Islamic confederation, from Senegal to the Sudan.

Soviet agents slip in and out of Kous-seri discreetly and regularly. They, the Chinese and the North Koreans cross the Shari River in dugout canoes to have a look around Ndjamena.

Unemployed mercenaries also turn up now and again in case anyone needs their skills. Into this melting pot of intrigue came a French salecracker the other day, and the amaigamation that gathers for beers on the hotel veranda is still getting mileage out of the story.

Central Bank

The crook was hired, be said candidly. by the former Chadian defense minister, Hissen Habre, whose forces were ex-pelled from Ndjamena by Libyan troops. The Frenchman said that his employer wanten him to get at the safe in the central bank and extract whatever sums lay there.

The money, he added, would be used to back Habre forces that were still said to be operating near the Sudanese boxder. The Frenchman mentioned a predecessor who had tried to do the job with a bazooka and was killed by the ricochet. That said, he took his tools, paddled the nver, met a safe that would not give, and slunk out of the area, or so the story

There has not been a juicy tele to tell since, and so it is retold at the Relais du Logone. Nor does much substantive information get gathered as the days burn by. When a Soviet-built MiG jet fighter takes off from the Ndjamena airport, loops the city or takes a long, screaming run down the river, everyone notes it, reports it to his superiors on his radio. and goes back to marking the days on the calendar until his tour is up. Eanes Warns Portugal of Fragile Democracy

LISBON - President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, in his first major speech since last week's unsuccessful coup in Spain, warned Thursday that Portugal's young democracy was also fragile

As he handed direct control of the armed forces to an independent commander for the first time since coming to power in 1976. President Eanes said: "We are, and it is necessary to recognize this, a country of insecure democratic traditions." ISTANBUL - A military judge has said that he had no jurisdiction in the case of a journalist charged with political agitation in his articles — indicating a possible softening of the military's attitude toward the press.

The judge Wednesday referred the case involving Othan Birgit, a journalist and former deputy secretary-general of the banned, left-of-center Republican Peoples Party, to a civilian court assigned to look into violations of the country's press regulations.

"It certainly shows a liberal attitude by the military," Mr. Birgit said in a telephone interview. He is free pending trial. The military prosecutor had asked for four to eight months in prison for Mr. Birgit, 53, who was managing editor of Dunya from November until he was charged in Feb-

ANKARA — Relations between Turkey and France, chilly in recent years, approached the freezing point Thursday with the assassination of two more Turkish diplomats on a Paris street. Resat Morali, 36, who worked in the Turkish Embassy section that deals with immigrant workers, was killed outright in the Wednesday attack, and Religious Affairs Counselor Teceli Ari died during the night in Val de Grace hospital. An Armenian terrorist group claimed responsibility. Mr. Ari's death was the fifth assassination of a Turkish diplomat or aide in France.

Since the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) began an interna-tional wave of violence six years ago, 18 Turkish diplomats, relatives and aides around the world have been killed.

Turks have turned their anger more toward France than to the America terrorists themselves Turks take Armenian enmity for granted and had expected the French authorities to do all they could to protect Turkish diplomats from terrorists. The Turks now feel the French are ignoring their duty to provide the diplomats with adequate security.

The Turkish government issued a statement condemning the assassinations and called in the French ambassador to Turkey, Emile Cazimajou, for what sources called the strongest Turkish protest yet over seeming French inability to dismantle the Aremenian terrorists operating in France.

failed military coup, the more flex-ible "political-military" branch of ETA declared an "unconditional cease-fire" and appealed to its "military" comrades also to lay down their arms. The militant wing issued an ap-

GENEVA - The International Labor Organization, a UN special-ized agency with 145 member states, sharply rebuked the Soviet Union on Thursday, charging it had persecuted workers seeking to form trade unions free of government control. In a report that noted the invol-

The premier's trip reflected the anxiety caused by Basque terrorism since the coup. An important factor in the coup was a wide-spread belief in the military that ETA is leading the northern region toward independence.

Only a week in office, Mr. Calvo sotelo is coming under strong pres-sure to declare a state of emergency in the Basque provinces as a means of appeasing the army, and perhaps checking ETA's violence.

Alberto Oliart, the new civilian defense minister, declared Thurs-day that "the armed forces will not intervene in the Basque region."
He said the police and paramili-tary civil guard would be strengthened, however.

The army chief of staff, Gen. Jose Gabeiras, who forcefully opposed the coup, stated Thursday that the armed forces "do not dream of imposing a dictatorship." But, in an unusual interview with the state-run radio, Gen. Gabeiras unmistakably underlined a producupation with terrorism at separatism, without using the words.

Prominent politicians may lend their prestige to the demonstrations as they did when similar protests were mounted throughout Canada on Feb. 28.

The Canadian government has made itself vulnerable to opposition heekling by taking the position that Canada, although it opposes U.S. military aid to El Salvador, does not intend to make a fuss about it.

MacGuigan Statement

Mark MacGuigan, secretary of external affairs, was criticized sharply in the House of Commons after a wire service dispatch quoted him as telling reporters in New York on Feb. 4, "I would certainly not condemn any decision the United States takes to send offensive arms there... The United States can at least count on our quiet acquiescence."

Mr. MacGuigan protested that the reporters had misquoted him; he insisted that be had said that the United States could count on Canada's "quiescence," not "acquiescence." The distinction, however, was mocked by his critics.

It is not clear, of course, whether the issue of El Salvador will have a significant role in the talks between Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Reagan. Mr. Trudeau did announce that the matter would be raised. But Mr. MacGuigan told foreign correspondents in Ottawa last Friday, "We don't regard this as an issue which is a matter of contention between our two countries,"

Canada has a host of perennial conten-tious matters to raise, including a fisheries treaty that is still stalled in the U.S. Senate, an auto pact that seems now to be benefiting the United States more than Canada, and acid rain pollution that flows from the United States. U.S. officials are concerned by the new Canadian energy policy that discriminates against foreign oil companies.

But these tend to be dull issues. Mr. Trudeau, who prides himself on his so-phistication in foreign affairs, may prefer sues with Mr. Reagan, including El Salva-nature of the experiment he was conducting.

Israel Was Not Told Full Nature of Tests By U.S. Geneticist

In a statement Wednesday, UCLA Chancellor Charles E. Young disclosed that the scientist, Dr. Martin J. Cline, had used recombinant DNA molecules in treating a young Israeli woman suffering from a serious hereditary blood disease.

Dr. Cline said in October that recombinant DNA was not used in the patient.

The pioneering buman experi-ment has become the center of a national scientific debate on the ethics of applying the new tech-niques of biology in man.

U.S. Probe

Since September, Dr. Cline's work in Israel and a similar human experiment performed in Italy a few days later have been the subject of a federal investigation. That investigation is reportedly being conducted by the National Insti-tutes of Health. The seriousness of Wednesday's allegation is indicated in Mr.

Young's statement, which said that Dr. Cline had permanently re-signed as chief of the division of hematology and oncology at the UCLA Schoolof Medicine, He had temporarily given up his position last fall in the dispute over the experiments. Because of the way the new techniques of biology evolved, re-combinant DNA technology is regulated by the government while other genetic engineering techniques are not. In recombinant experiments, genetic material from two species are chemically joined together. And there have been fears that such mixing and matching of biological material could produce bacteria that might be difficult to contain and control.

The fears have greatly subsided as scientists have had more experience with the new techniques, but many of the rules, although softened, remain in place.

Such experiments in man, if done with U.S. funding, are still tightly controlled. And approval for the use of recombinant DNA molecules in bumans would probably have to come from the director of the National Institutes of Health, which funds the bulk of nonmilitary research in the United

Dr. Cline apparently treated the Israeli woman with human and vi-rus genes that had been spliced together.
"The Israelis were exceedingly upset and wrote very strong letters to [the National Institutes of Health] in protest when they found out," said an official close to the federal probe of the experiments.

Federal Restrictions

Scientists who violate the rule can be urdered to halt all work with recombinant DNA, and in theory the U.S. government could cut off all aid to those scientists. The UCLA chancellor's state-ment emphasized that a campus investigation of Dr. Cline's work showed that the patients and their families "were informed about the experimental nature and the possible risks and benefits of the treat-ment, and that they consented willingly. Further, no harm has come to the two patients and it remains possible at this time that the experiments may provide informa-tion helpful to patients with this and similar conditions."

The disease, Beta Thelassemia, affects the bone marrow and causes a severe, life-shortening anemia, Dr. Cline was unavailable for comment

For more than a year, Dr. Cline tried to get approval to do a genetic engineering experiment in parents at the UCLA Medical Center. Shortly after he performed the experiments in Israel and Italy, a UCLA committee, charged with reviewing experiments in humans, turned down his request to do similar work here.

A similar review of the experiments took place in Israel, by a committee that was headed by the father of Dr. Cline's Israeli collab-orator, Eliczer Rachmilewetz. The Israelis called in their own experts in genetic engineering, who they said were assured that no recombinant DNA work was involved.

Cambodia Needs More Aid

BANGKOK (Renters) — Inter-national relief agencies will tell na-tions giving aid to Cambodia Friday that they still need $127 million to prevent the country from sliding back into disaster this year.

The agencies are expected to tell ntatives of donor countries at a meeting in New York that despite progress in the past year the situation in Cambodia remains fragile.

Relief agency sources here have estimated Cambodia's aid needs at $200 million. About $68 million has already been contributed and more has been pledged. The aid goes to Cambodians inside the country as well as to those along the Thai-Cambodian border and in Thai refugee camps.

The sources said that with inter-national aid and the resilience of its people, Cambodia had been moving back to normality after the revolutionary turmoil and famine of recent years. But the situation remains delicately balanced and could be tilted toward disaster if, for example, the monsoon failed later this year, the relief agency sources said.

They said some 102,500 tons of food grains were needed before the middle of the year to avoid severe food shortages and malnutrition in

Trade With Iran: Too Soon

What are we to make of the resumption of wheat sales to Iran by U.S. companies? It is just six weeks since the hostages were released from their 444 days of captivity. Briefly after their return - even from this limited perspective in time it seems just a fleeting moment — they dominated the mind and the media of the United States. But now is is back to business as usual. There is something unseemly about the haste. It raises questions about the much-publicized resolve and toughness of the new president and his men.

What will the Iranians think? Will terrorists tempted to act against U.S. citizens be deterred by the administration's tough talk about not negotiating, or will they ask themselves what penalty Iran paid for tying a can to the Great Satan's tail? And what will the Soviet Union think?

Certainly, at some point, it would be desirable for the United States to restore good relations with Iran, even if on terms somewhat different from those in effect in the days of the shah. It also would be appropriate that the first contacts be commercial rather than diplomatic. And it can be argued that there is little point in putting off the inevitable. After all, there is a lot at stake in Iran in both energy and geopolitical terms and if the United States is reticent, the Soviet Union surely won't be.

The Reagan administration made the right decision in deciding to honor the bargain reached between the Iranians and President Carter for the hostages' release. International obligations had been undertaken involving the good name and credibitty of several countries other than Iran and the United States. Whatever the arguments against keeping bargains made with criminals, there was a commitment to Algeria, West Germany and Britain to carry out the agreement in

But that was the limit of the U.S. obligation. And as far as getting back into the 1ranian scene quickly is concerned, the question remains with whom? Ayatollah Khomeini is 80 and ill and there is a fierce battle for power among the radical clergy, the moderates like President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the Communists, military factions and others. A few wheat shipments for cash now are unlikely to earn much credit with the next ruler of Iran, whoever he may be. All they will do is make the United States look like a pushover for a collapsing outlaw regime with diminishing support at home and practically none abroad. It is too soon to resume trade

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

U.S. Defense Manifesto

The new Reagan defense paper is not so much a budget as a manifesto. Politically, it announces the administration's determination to show that the U.S. political system can carry through expensive new military programs over a protracted period, notwith-standing the other strains on U.S. resources. Geopolitically, it advertises a determination to project U.S. power around the globe — to newly critical areas like the Gulf and, for that matter, to the shores of the Soviet Un-

The budget is based on the familiar Reagan contention that the United States has failed to meet the Soviet buildup of recent years and is therefore not in a position to cope with the various probes and adventures that buildup has made possible. It is not for this administration to be more selective about the international responsibilities that the United States should be ready to bear. Rather, its choice is to show with greater certainty that it can bear them all.

This budget says that little or no part of U.S. security, broadly conceived, should rest on expectation of restraint by or cooperation with the Soviet Union. The hope is that, in practice, this approach will produce more Soviet restraint and cooperation than might otherwise be forthcoming. The military contingencies foreseen are considerable, and the five-year Reagan defense plan would let the administration meet virtually all of them.

There will be time, in the budget process, for the program choices of the Reagan Pentagon to be examined. What most needs attention now is the bold and ambitious character of the budget and especially its emphasis on improving the worldwide mobility and visibility of U.S. forces and on building up the Navy. It may help to consider two particular parties or people, among many, who will be reading the budget in their fashions.

The first would be the Politburo, perhaps Leonid Brezhnev, himself newly reconfirmed with literally all his old colleagues in the Soviet leadership. Will the Politburo be sobered by the spectacle of the United States mobilizing, or provoked to match or end-run the U.S. effort, or pleased at what it may see as the prospect of U.S. overextension? The second would be some unnamed guerrilla currently pushing his way through the mountain country of El Salvador. Will he, too, be intimidated by the builetin his transistor radio brings him, or will be figure he should move fast to beat the buildup, or will he conclude that it confirms everything he ever thought about the inability of the North American Colossus to deal with revolutionary situations around the globe?

Every budget - every defense budget - is a wager on history, but these are some of the central questions that must now be asked. THE WASHINGTON POST.

What Price a Soviet Jew?

Without a word of explanation, the Soviet Union is again letting Jews leave in large numbers. It may be only an illusion that Moscow regulates the flow of this human traffic with its expectations of U.S. trade or other reward. But the record of a decade and the newest signal suggest such a correlation — a purposeful bartering with a people's fate. It cries out for U.S. authorities to investigate Moscow's price.

The emigres themselves have no consistent explanation for the oscillations in their exit permits. Though many are well versed in Soviet political affairs, they have been reduced to speculating about the work loads of the Soviet security policy, the whims of regional party organizations, the climate of Soviet relations with Arab nations.

But the most consistent correlation is with Soviet-U.S. commerce. Most of 250,000 Jewish emigrants since 1971 have been cleared for travel to Israel - yet two-thirds of them have ended up in the United States. And given the vociferous concern for them by American Jewish organizations, by Congress and presidential candidates, it is not unreasonable for the Kremlin to have concluded that the pace of emigration can be a valuable currency in dealings with the United States.

Just look at the pattern since 13,000 Soviet Jews were unexpectedly allowed to leave in 1971: With the signing of SALT-1, the first big wheat deal and the promise of more trade, the number rose in 1972 and 1973 to 32,000 and 35,000. Then came the Jackson-Vanik amendment, impeding trade unless Jews were allowed to leave freely, and the departures declined sharply, to 21,000 in 1974, 13,000 in 1975, 14,000 in 1976 and 17,000 in 1977. The amendment remains in force, but with progress toward SALT-2 and a further wheat deal, emigration rose again to 29,000 in 1978 and to a record total of 51,000 in 1979. Then came Afghanistan, the wheat embargo and other trade restrictions, and the 1980 figure fell to 21,000.

Just coincidence? Perhaps. But if trade is not the explanation, there must be another. These patterns are not accidental in such a centralized society, where the Politburo often takes up the case of a single individual's emigration - and where the right of exodus for an entire ethnic group of 2 million must be a sore point in the authorities' dealings with other, larger minorities.

At the end of the Carter administration, fewer than 1.000 Jews a month were being allowed to leave. Then, at the approach of President Reagan's inauguration in mid-January, the visa stampers suddenly began working overtime - not only in Moscow but in many Soviet cities. Departures soared again to a rate of 36,000 a year, though no one knows how long it will continue.

Someone high in the U.S. government ought to ask, and keep probing for the price in commerce. No one in Moscow is foolish enough to have thought that a tough-sounding new president would alter his basic diplomacy or military spending to purchase freedom for some Jews. But some signal is apparently intended.

If there is a chance for an unacknowledged barter, of emigres in exchange for wheat or other products, the price ought to be shrewdly surmised. It is not enough to condemn those who would thus sell human beings if those in a position to buy their freedom fail to recognize the opportunity and responsibil-

WASHINGTON - A Prohibition storm broke over the Democratic National Committee meeting at the Hotel Mayflower today when John J. Raskob, national chairman, announced his plan to solve Prohibition by granting states "home rule" on liquor. He urged party leaders to recommend to the next national convention an amendment to the Constitution allowing this plan to be put into operation. Prohibition, Mr. Raskob maintained, will undoubtedly be the major issue when the national convention meets next year. It became apparent that the attitude of Mr. Raskob and other members of the Democratic 'wet' bloc threatens to split the ranks of the party.

PARIS - Since Charles de Gaulle created the Fifth Republic in 1958, every national elec-tion in France has underlined the dilemma of how to achieve an un-dramatic transfer of power.

The two-round voting system ensured that left and right would line up against each other in the second poll, and offer the country not so much a choice of government as a choice of regime. The conservatives always won. But close races produced near panic among businessmen, concern over the stability of the nation, and the stability of the nation, and queeziness among France's allies. When he first ran for president in 1974, Valery Giscard d'Estaing promised to end this political polarization and create "an enlarged majority" of centrists and moderate leftists.

Same Warning

Yet there he was last Monday right, after seven years in the Elysee Palace, telling his compatriots in the best tradition of De Gaulle that the choice facing them in the next two-round presidential contest on April 26 and May 10 was between his re-election and leftist

More than any other major candidate, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has discovered the discreet charms of a renewed ideological battle. Fran-cois Mitterrand, the Socialist stan-dardbearer, and Jacques Chirac, the neo-Gaullist leader, would both rather run against the president's record. Georges Marchais, the Communist candidate who has taken his party into deep polit isolation, would rather run against everybody.

The president's tactic was dictated by the sudden decline in his popularity over recent months — a phenomenon attributed to rising inflation and unemployment, and his own aristocratic political style. His supporters had been arguing for weeks that he had to abandon his Olympian stance and carry out a no-holds-barred fight to prevent his opponents from setting the pace and themes of the campaign.

Besides, the Giscardists insist, the president's efforts to push reforms that would depolarize the French political scene have been rejected by the leftist opposition leaders, who failed to respond to the olive branches extended to them after their defeats in the 1974 presidential and 1978 legislative

But during his term in office, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has carried out few measures that might have helped to bridge the ideological chasm in French politics. The repeated promises to decentralize power in the country, to appoint officials of different political persussions, to make concessions to opposition ideas in Parliament have not been met

Nowadays, even conservatives talk about the Giscardian state,

Neutron Bomb Fears

People in the Netherlands, West Germany, and Belgium, who took to the streets to defeat plans to produce and deploy the neutron bomb would hardly agree that "Soviet propaganda has raised irrational fears of it ..." (IHT, Feb. 14.15) much the same way that people used to talk about the Gaulist state back in the 1960s.

Yet this time around, it is not in the interest of the Socialist candidate, Mr. Mitterrand, to hold out the illusion that a leftist victory will lead to a wholesale purge of government, a radically new economic policy and a sharp change in French positions in foreign af-

But the center-right government maintained control of Parliament after the Communists turned against their Socialist allies and retreated back to Stalinist orthodoxy. The worldwide dimension of the economic crisis has eroded the credibility of left-wing ideological solutions even among significant numbers of French trade unionists. And the country's traditionally leftist intellectuals seem to have entered a long period of disen-chantment with Marxism.

As a result, in the current campaign, Mr. Mitterrand and the So-cialists would rather be viewed as a center-left alternative to Giscardism — no more radical than a So-cial Democratic party replacing a Christian Democratic government elsewhere in Western Europe.

In any true democracy, Giscard would be swept from office because one would judge him on his record," said Lionel Jospin, the first secretary of the Socialist Party, pushing the idea that what is atstake is a normal alternation in

Marchais Attacks

For this strategy to succeed, Mr. Mitterrand must still prove that he can govern without the cantankerous Communist party, which has stubbornly held on to about one-fifth of the electorate. His sides, have asserted that there need be no. Communist miristers in Socialist Cabinet, and Mr. Mitte. and Lar hinted that he could find enough support elsewhere — perhaps among dissident neo-Gattlists — to form a viable government if elected

But Mr. Marchais, who is attacking the Socialists at least as hard as he is criticizing the president, insists that any leftist government would have to include Communist ministers and take into account his party's program.

And to the extent that this is believed by a majority of the French, President Giscard d'Estaing may well be successful in diverting attention away from his own record to the perennial issue of conserva-tive stability versus leftist disorder.

WASHINGTON - When Ronald Reagan was asked by Walter Cronkite about the Soviet feelers for a summit conference, the president allowed as how "it would make it a lot easier" if the imperialism of Soviet surrogates were to be moderated. The first example he pointed to: "Qadhafi in Nobody disputes the extent of the Soviet presence in Libya. Thirty-five hundred Soviet and East German advisers help command Col Qadhafi's 35,000-man army, training the Libyans in the use of Soviet weaponry, while Soviet pilots show Libyans how to fly the latest MiG-25s and MiG-27s.

Complacent But the doves in Congress, many of whom stopped the Ford administration from preventing the Soviet-Cuban takeover of Angola in 1975, are complacent about the Soviet-Libyan takeover of Chad. They view the Libyan strongman as an Arab aberration, a pas-sionate nut who provides a haven for professional terrorists, criticizes the Palestine Liberation Organization for being insufficiently anti-Israel, who hires a presidential brother to gain influence at the White House, who proclaims him-self the leader of a mysterious third force" in the world - but who is nobody to take seriously. He has a strategic mission that not enough of us take seriously: to undermine and help overthrow the conservative Arab states like Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Morocco; to establish a Saharan empire stretching across North Africa to the Gulf; and then to bridge the Arab and African worlds with a reach south through Chad to Zaire and I loands and Uganda.

How is he going to do this from base of 3 million Libyans? Egyptians outnumber Libyans more than 13 to 1; there are even more Israelis than Libyans. Answer:

Up to now, such fear of Col. Qadhafi has been grist for bestselling novelists, but his seizure two month ago of a southern neighbor show the colonel to be more than a paperback tiger.

The French, whose African interests are threatened, are miffed; the African states, worried about their own internal opposition, are making surly noises — although Tanzania checrfully sold 1,000 Libyan prisoners back to Col. Qadhafi for $40 million. Egypt's Anwar Sadat, who was restrained by the Carter administration from answering provocative actions along his Libyan frontier, undoubtedly feels threatened by reports of Col. Qadhafi's purchase of Soviet SS-12 missiles whose 500mile range endangers Nile dams.

Democratic Response

Meanwhile, House Democrats mounted what was advertised in advance as the beginning of a Democratic response to the Reagan economic program, a "testing of the waters" to see how far the party should go in criticizing Reagan economic policies. But only half the designated speakers turned up for what amounted to desultory complaints about inter-

Mr. Kirkland, a prime mover in a coalition of 157 groups that are fighting Mr. Reagan's economic program, challenged the basic premise of the president's bodgetcutting drive; That spending and deficits cause inflation. In fact, he said, spending retrenchment and inflation have occurred simultaoccusly in recent years.

Mr. Kirkland was especially critical of the administration's plan to cut trade adjustment assistance for workers whose jobs are jeopardized by imports, restrict money available for Medicaid, climinate the minimum Social Security benefit and cut out public service jobs. The cuts do not cut the cost of social programs," he said. "They defer some and shift others to the budgets of the states, localities and the poor."

As for Mr. Reagan's proposed tax cut of 30 percent over three years, he said: "Those families who have suffered the sharpest declines in living standards due to inflation get the least benefit from the tax cut proposal." The administration's business tax cuts, he added, would help "linance speculative ventures, corporate take-overs, industrial flight or foreign expansion at the expense of U.S.

L ONDON — The applause at the polyvisual, tricolored conclusion of Abel Gance's 1927 silent film epic, "Napoleon," at 5:15 Sunday afternoon at the Empire Theater, Leicester Square, was not only for the obsent Gance, now 91 and living in France, nor alone for the present Kevin Brown-low, who had restored the film to something approximating its original shape and length.

It was also, and very much so, a tribute to Brooklyn-born Carl Davis and the 50-piece Wren Orchestra, who had been playing Davis' score since 10:30 a.m. (with 20-minute coffee and tea breaks and a one-hour lunch break), as they will be breaks and a one-bour lunch break), as they will be doing again March 8 and 15.

The New York showing had a score by Carmine Coppola, drawn from Beethoven, Berlioz. 18th-century street songs and, inevitably, the "Marseillaise." Davis' score wanders further afield, although not from the period, quoting extensively from Beethoven and touching base so to speak with Cherubini, Dittersdorf, Gluck, Gossec, Gretry, Haydn, Mehul, Monsigny, Mozart and Paisiello, recalling Corsican folk songs, and exposing the "Marseillaise" to a seeming infinity of harmonic and instrumental variation. and instrumental variation

Why Carl Davis? Simply because in the 20 years he has been living and working in London, he has proven so adept at making the music fit the time (and the situation) that he is commonly referred to as "television's musical Everyman." And not just television. His credits on radio, television, films and theater, plus a symphony and six operas, run to 12 single-spaced pages.

As a free-lance composer, he has worked for both BBC-TV and Thames Television, and it was the latter, as co-sponsor with the British Film Institute and Images Film Archive of these showings of "Napoleon," who commissioned the score, doubtless encouraged by the command of period style displayed in the music he provided last year for "Hollywood." 8 13-part Thames history of the silent film era. His mastery of styles and his familiarity with just about every idiom from Renaissance to rock, are the result of native musical curiosity combined with a gift for sight reading at the piano, that led him into —for a composer — a highly unorthodox career, staff pianist for the Robert Shaw Chorale, coach for the New York City Opera and rehearsal pianist for the Royal Danish Ballet, punctuated by academie study at the New England Conservatory of Music and with Paul Nordoff at Bard College.

His facility as pianist and reader nudged him toward a career as musical handyman, but hardly toward the heights he has now attained. Composinion made the difference, and that came fairly late in the game, which explains his sporadic academic experience. It happened in Philadelphia while on tour with the Robert Shaw Chorale. As he tells it:

There were some of us on the tour who played chamber music together in our spare time. We were in Presser's Music Store discussing what Brahms or Beethoven trios we might get hold of, when I glanced at a book of blank manuscript paper lying on the counter. The empty page was so inviting! I wanted to fill it with music. It seemed the natural thing to do. So I bought the paper and composed some songs to poems by my fevorite poet, e.e. cummings, and a trio for two clarinets and bassoon, booked a studio for 10 days ahead when we played in Nashville, and did a der with musicians and singers from the Chorale. From that moment I was hooked on composition, and used the tape to get into Bard College and study with Paul Nordolf."

Composers today can be divided roughly into two categories. In one are those who earn a living in the academic world or the musical bureaucracy in order to write music for which there is bitle or no demand. They are the ones who are taken seriously by "serious" critics. In the 11ther category are those who earn a living by supplying the very great demand of the theater world — films, television, incidental music for plays and theatrical arrange-ments. Because they work to order, so to speak, it is their misfortune - or maybe their good fortune - to be overlooked by the critics.

It is a craftsman's world, and Davis approached the "Napoleon" score with a craftsman's zeal and with a craftsman's skills, spending bours with a video cassette copy of the film.

The job was to select the music suited to period, location, situation and character, to determine exact durations, cut accordingly, fashion joints, reorchestrate and supply original music when required.

What the audience experienced last Sunday took older heads back to the days when every major movie house in the larger cities had its own orchestra and musical director. Only this was on a grander scale. It received almost no critical notice, but Carl Davis is not complaining. Tm not a frustrated classicist," he says. "What I do, I like doing. But I'm doing it for a living and I'm not ashamed of being paid for it. But then that was Mozart's point of view - and Verdi's and Beethoven's!

Bernstein's Love Affair With Vienna

By David Stevens

International Herald Tribute
VIENNA — Leonard Bern-V stein's long-running love af-fair with Vienna is currently at a peak with the production of his "Mass" — the German-language premiere of this "theater piece for singers, players and dancers," and the first production of a work by an American composer in that operatic sanctum sanctorum, the Vienna State Opera.

"You are in the world Bernstein capital," Marcel Prawy exulted as he directed curtain calls for the huge cast after the fourth performance. The enthusiastic audience seemed to include many from outside the usual operatic crowd. "We expected a succes d'estime, but it's a real hit," Prawy said, adding that a revival is planned next season.

Prawy, Chefdramaturg of the Staatsoper, is also translator and producer of several of Bernstein's stage works and, in particular, the organizer and overall producer of this version of "Mass," modeled on, but by no means a copy of, the 1971 original at the Kennedy Cen-ter in Washington. Prawy conceded that there had been plenty of opposition to put-ting it on in the big house on the Ringstrasse, Vienna remains archconservative, and many persons who enthuse over Bernstein's interpretations of Beethoven, Stranss and Mahler, are considerably more reserved about Bernstein the composer. A typical critical reaction was Franz Endler's in Die Presse, praising the work but finding that like Walther von Stolzing among the Mastersingers it was "jehl am Ort," in the wrong place. He did not mention that in "Die Meistersinger," Walther eventually wins

The organizational demands for this project were enormous. Even though the work was being given in German, Bernstein's musical and scenic requirements often call for specifically American talents, and its pop ecumenism cries ont for a multinational cast. Prawy used some house Americans, like Melanie Holliday, who was in the Vienna staging of Bernstein's "Candide" and is the Volksoper's Queen of the Night, and Reid nger, an American baritone at the Staatsoper, as well as individual performers imported from the Americas; there were real Viennese, like Franz Waechter in the central role of the celebrant, an astonishingly poised soloist from the Vienna Choir Boys, the Vienna

Celebrant and dancer in a scene from "Mass" in Vienna.

Philharmonic in the pit and native rock and blues groups on the stage. One rock on which the production almost foundered was the need for classically trained wind players who could perform onstage. "I went to Graz University and persuaded them to declare it curriculum," Prawy said, "so 21 wind players learned these difficult parts on school time."

"Mass" takes the Roman Catholic liturgy as its framework and intersperses it with words by Bernstein and Stephen Schwartz ("Godspell") so that the faith implicit in the liturgy is challenged by skepticism and doubt. Musically it is as heterogeneous as Bernstein's own career, ranging sesthetically from the "Missa Solemnis" to "West Side Story" to rock Bible epics, from the deeply felt to the trivial. Maybe the devil does not get all the good times, but rock-and-blues disbelievers trump the Credo, and the balance is not entirely restored by the return of the "simple song" at the end.

The Vienna staging is a monster apparatus, musically under the su-perb control of Maurice Peress (who conducted the original), staged by Wolfgang Weber in an array of panels and projections by Guentber Schneider-Siemssen. William Milie's choreography was suitably eclectic-idiomade, including an estractive solo for Donna Wood of the Alvin Ailey company. Waechter was an appealing Celebrant, although his high, light baritone did not really carry off the scene of emotional breakdown.

"Here 'Mass' is tougher than in Washington," Prawy remarked, with a less beppy ending, a little less sweet. There is a certain aspect of togetherness we cannot produce with European performers.

At the Burgtheater, the Viennese seemed to take Peter Shaffer's "Amadeus" in their stride at its German-language premiere, per-haps because they already know about Mozart's scatological, antisocial side, perhaps too because of the excellent, lavish production by Peter Wood and designer Carl Toms, Romnald Pekny's witty and ironic Salieri seemed more to the point than Paul Scofield's Ingubrious performance in London, although the critics were harder on Michael Heltau's Mozart, less grotesque but more mannered than Simon Callow's original.

Dart is also losing another key executive. Phillip Matthews, vice president and chief financial officer, is moving to the Whittaker Corp., a diversified chemicals and manufacturing company. No successor has been named.

Mr. Richman acknowledged that Dart managers and corporate officers might be cautious of their new generals in Illinois. "You're putting two staffs together and you'll get some of that," he said. But there has been precious little" in the way of problems.

"Each department head at the corporate level participated in dis-cussions of how we could best run the company," Mr. Batts said. "We multiplied the efforts of a lot of people by doing it ourselves. We don't have any 'Not Invented Here' factors to overcome,

Mr. Richman has ruled out blending Kraft products with Dart divisions. Instead, Kraft is being managed as one of six separate business units under the Dart & Kraft corporate umbrella. "It would be futile, certainly in a cultural sense, to try to make one company out of Dart & Kraft," he said. "We want to preserve the identity and autonomy of these separate businesses."

The other five were already independent divisions in the Dart structure; Tupperware, P.R. Mallory (Duracell batteries), consumer products (West Bend appliances and cookware), Thatcher Glass and chemicals and plastics. "We are moving to an organization that looks more like Dart - heterogenous and decentralized — than Kraft," Mr. Richman said.

Congress Urged to Repeal Parts of Anti-Bribery Act

By Martha M. Hamilton Washington Post Service.

WASHINGTON - The General Accounting Office recommended on Wednesday that Congress amend the Foreign Corrupt Prac-tices Act to repeal criminal penalties associated with violations of the accounting provisions and that forcement meet business community objections to the act.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act was passed in 1977 after revelations about widespread corporate bribery and other wrongdoing. Major offenses had been uncovered by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which found corporations had misled shareholders and disguised millions of dollars in payments. As public concern over the revelations has subsided, corporations covered by the act have been successful in mitigating it, winning Justice Department and SEC agreement to give them some gui-dance in advance about whether

NYSE Prices Falter; Profits Taken in Oils

From Agency Dispatches
NEW YORK — Prices on the
New York Stock Exchange retreated Thursday in moderate trading as investors contioued to take profits in the oils.

Analysts also cited some caution late in the day ahead of several economic indicators — wholesale prices, consumer credit and money supply — are due Friday tomorrow. Despite the general weakness. several issues benefitted from take-over speculation.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 6.82 points to close at 964.62 as declines edged advances eight to seven. Turnover slowed to 45 million shares from 47.26 million Wednesday.

Analysts said institutional investors continued to take profits in the oils and other recently strong groups and re-employ them in un-dervalued issues. Analysts said the oils continue to lose their appeal in view of the world oil glut. They said with the outlook for interest rates and the economy still murky, there was little incentive to be aggressive on either side of the market.

Meanwhile, Henry Kaulman of Salomon Brothers reaffirmed his recent prediction that prime lending rate soon will decline to the 17to 18-percent range from the 18½-percent rate set by most banks now, but rates will remain highly volatile and begin climbing to 21 percent or higher late in 1981.
He said that he has no confidence lower interest rates can be sustained because there is "nothing in [President Reagan's] fiscal policy in 1981 to retard the inflationary process" The "burdeo of restraint" rests on the Federal Reserve System, he added.

The Reagan administration should aim to balance the federal budget sooner than projected, he said, instead of spending more for defense while cutting taxes, which will intensify inflationary expecta-

Fed Outlines Mark Buys

NEW YORK - The dollar's strength on foreign exchange mar-kets during the November-January quarter allowed the U.S. govern-ment to buy $4.4 billion in Deutsche marks to repay foreign debt and bolster its reserves of other currencies, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said

Wednesday.
The strength of the dollar during the quarter enabled the New York Fed, which acts for the Reserve System and the Treasury in foreign exchange transactions, to repay all of its swap debt. The swap net-work consists of $30.3 billion in short-term, recriprocal credit lines between the Fed, 14 central banks and the Bank for International

Scott E. Pardee, senior vice president in charge of the New York Fed's foreign exchange operations, told a news conference that U.S. authorities acquired $105 million in Swiss francs in addition to the marks during the period, Mr. Pardee said that during late January, when a "one-way move-ment into dollars" developed, the U.S. authorities purchased marks "virtually every day."

The total purchases were the largest for a three-month period since $4.8 billion in marks, Japa-nese yen and Swiss francs were bought in the February-April 1980 period, Mr. Pardee said.

He said the Federal Reserve came under no pressure from the West German central bank to buy marks during the quarter. "We just acted in line with market forces," Mr. Pardee said.

In Frankfurt, the Central Bank Council of the Bundesbank did not take any decisions on monetary and credit policy Thursday, effectively leaving its key discount rate unchanged at 7.5 percent, a spokesman said. The spokesman added that the council made no decision on closing the special Lombard facility, which it introduced two weeks ago. The Lombard rate remained at 12

On the basis of the most recent figures, for last Sept. 30, GMAC's

Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs said its eight-year investigation showed that the major oil companies entered into "explicit and tacit arrangements" designed to boost prices, especially at the wholesale level, to restrict supplies to independent marketers and to deter the entry of independents into refinery operations.

Robert Bertrand, who headed the investigation, said the practices are continuing, adding that "competition within the Canadian petroleum industry today is at its lowest ebb since 1958." The report recommended forcing the companies to divest them-selves of some of their assets, using

Bonn East Trade Rises

BONN - West German trade with centrally planned economies in Eastern Europe and Asia grew by 5.5 percent in 1980, well below the average 14 percent increase in West Germany's foreign trade last year, the Economics Ministry said Thursday. West German exports to its biggest East bloc partner, the Soviet Union, grew by 20 percent last year, while imports from the Russians were only 0.4 percent higher, the ministry said.

Hearings before the commission, a quasijudicial body, could last up to two years.

UNRELIABLE MEMOIRS

By Clive James, Knopf, 171 pp. $10.

Reviewed by Anarole Broyard

FACED with a charming book, one is tempted to elevate it to wit or dismiss it as mildly entertaining. Charm may be too delicate or elusive a quality for the pitch and page of the times. We tend to associate it, in an author, with a too-modest ambition, a desire merely to please.
Yet Clive James "Unreliable Memoirs" is chaming and that is the only word for it. Though he is funny and wistful, he is not always original. In taking us through his childhood in Australia, he shows us that it was not very different from all the American or English childhoods we have read about in other charming books.

In his adolescence, James was slow to grow. He says "the small boy is usually obliged to be amusing just as the fat boy is usually obliged to be amiable." No longer a small boy now, he still feels obliged to be amusing and sometimes we can almost hear and sometimes we can almost near him working at it.

"I was the captive of my fluent tongue," he writes. "The effort of being continuously diverting left me limp." In "Unreliable Memoirs," it doesn't leave him limp, exactly, but neither is his personality tense with intrinsic interest. After saying that he has been careful not to spare his own feelings that he is determined to exfeelings, that he is determined to expose himself in a bad light, he admits that "the ego arranges the bad light to its own satisfaction." One remembers that self-depreciation is our contem-porary form of boasting.

After a while, one begins to wonder where the facts lie among all these demurrers, this flood of disarming. rhetoric. It may be that there was too much slapstick and too little tragedy in James' childhood. Without a bit of heartbreak, childhood is interesting mainly to children and doting parents.

But "Unreliable Memoirs" is funny. One keeps coming back to that. When he was a small boy, James' head stock out, in the manner of small boys' heads, too much in back and he worried about it and studied his profile in the mirror. He says "I envied. boys with no back to their heads. Even today I envy James Garner."

FACES IN MY TIME

By Anthony Powell. Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

Illustrated, 230 pp. $14.95.

FOR those who don't know him, Anthony Powell is an English writer who wrote five very good novels in the '30s and a dozen not quite as good, collectively called "A Dance to the Music of Time," between then and now. So far as I can remember, no-body in the United States paid any attention to the early novels when they first came out except Robert Vanderbilt, the owner of the Holliday Bookshop in New York City, who introduced me to Powell's books and of them in one volume.

Like Henry Green, an even better novelist, Anthony Powell was too English to catch on in the United States at first. It was only when his 12-volume connected series attracted reviews by offering a glib and inaccurate comparison to Proust that Powell became known. While "A Dance to the Music of Time" is certainly an accomplished work, the U.S. response to the volumes coming one after another is reminiscent of vandeville audiences' applause when a tap dancer repeats a particular step. The public respects stick-to-itiveness and there are quite a few less-talented novelists than Powell who have built their reputations on

Now Powell is writing his memoirs. and he has every reason to. England is a small country and it appears, from "Faces in My Time," the third volume of another projected series, that the author knew almost everyone worth knowing in his day. We learn that Elizabeth Bowen was blind to cock-roaches in her kitchen, that Dylan Thomas fell asleep under a bed in which two women were unsuccessfully trying to make love, that Somerset Maugham prided himself on a rather inadequate knowledge of British so-cial protocol, that F. Scott Fitzgerald was surprised that Lord Donegall should be surprised when he used the word "cinquecento."

The novelist L.P. Hartley warred on a river with hostile swans. When Maicolm Muggeridge, at the end of a bi-bulous evening, approached a cab with the words, "Are you a taxi?" the cabby, a literary critic manque, an-

Now South was able to ruff, lead to the diamond ten and ruff the last club in dummy. He then played his dia-mond winners and it did not matter swered "No. I'm a taxi driver." En-lyn Waugh, perhaps as a fisher to souls, offered Cyril Connolly a fire trip to Rome for an important resp ious occasion. Graham Greene was a holy terror as a film critic. T.S. Eliot combined "tea party coziness" with "a cold intellectuality." Sometimes "Faces in My Time" gets a little more ruminative than some readers might wish. Powell asks himself whether George Orwell was influenced by Charles Peguy, whether Joseph Courad was affected by Hemi Frederic Amiel. He goes into considerable detail about the favorite read ing of a fellow officer during the war.

Powell is also the author of "John Aubrey and His Friends," a critical biography of a 17th-century writer who wrote a wonderfully pithy book of short portraits called, "Bue Lives." Aubrey's book was in the form of notes that he never found time to finish and these have a lively. staccato shorthand quality. Powell also uses a "Brief Lives" approach in "Faces in My Time," but his shorthand, curiously enough, is not pithy or staccato but verbose and circumlocutory. He is capable of writing phrases like "recognizing the expediency of not contemplating too analytically the metamorphosis." Or 'my immediately postwar dentist."

Literary historians may be concerned to know how Powell's fictional soldiers correspond to the gentlemen he based them on. I was not, but these. portraits are enjoyable in their own right. It is interesting to hear Powell say that reviewing anonymously in The Times Literary Supplement, speaking as the voice of the paper, as it were, tends to inhibit both praise, When Powell returned from Hollywood, where he was briefly employed in writing a film about messenger boys, he found the pocket of his dinner jacket filled with swizzle sucks. That's what "Faces in My Time" reminds me of: a dinner-jacket pocket. filled with swizzle sticks.

Women's volleyball is often cited as the prime exaple of what can be done.

Albert M. Monaco Jr., executive director of the U.S. Volleyball Association, points out that the nucleus of the 1980 team was together in 1973 and that six of its members had been involved from the time the coach was hired in January, 1975. The team trained for long periods in Colorado Springs.

Relocation

The Volleyball Association, the sport's governing body, has moved to Colorado Springs from its previ-ous headquarters in Pasadena, Texas, and is spending $250,000 a year developing its 1984 teams, sending squads abroad three times a year. Monaco said it provides enough "pocket money" to team members training here.

Some of the financing comes from grants from the USOC, which provides free training facilities and room and board at the training center here. Some support comes from the Adolph Coors brewery, and more money and equipment are being provided by the Mizuno Co., a Japanese company that makes vol-leyball gear. "No American equipment company gives a damn," Monaco said in explaining the Japanese

Larry H. McCollum, a development specialist for the USOC, said one of the troubles is that many ath-letes in the more obscure sports do not realize they can earn a living in those sports after they have competed in the Olympics. Even such sports as fencing and judo "can be parlayed into financial success," McCollum asserted, "A fencer who wins a medal can open a fencing school later."

McCollum cartioned that throwing money into a sport or developing training techniques or biomechanical and medical profiles are not the whole answer to building a victorious Olympic team.

Key Steps

Miller said he believes raising the necessary money

America are the greatest steps to achieving the USOC's goals for 1984:

The USOC plans to break ground this spring for a $4.5-million indoor training arena at its Colorado Springs center, headed by Bob Mathias, a former Olympic decathlon gold medalist. Miller's other immediate goals at the training center: an $8-million aquatics center, a $17-million ice arena, a $2-million velodrome for cycling and a $2.5-million Olympic Hall of Fame and Museum.

Of the $71.2 million the USOC plans to spend "at a minimum" on all items in the 1981-84 period, at least $54.6 million is expected to come through contributions. Federal grants are expected to amount to $4 million and other receipts, mainly from the sale of TV rights for national sports festivals and Olympic trials, are projected at $12.6 million.

USOC leaders say they are aware that in the past the committee did little to reach out for broad nation-al support. "This organization," Miller acknowledged, "almost was operating as a closed society." All that,

Skater Santee Takes Lead; Soviet Duo Wins First Gold

By Frank Litsky

New York Times Service HARTFORD - David Santee of the United States, with a strong performance in the short program, took the men's overall lead Wednesday in the World Figure Skating Championships here.

American Scott Hamilton won the short program, moved up to third in the overall standing and loomed as Santee's strongest challenger for the Thursday night's gold medal.

The first of the four gold medals—in the pairs competition—was won Wednesday night by the Soviet husband-wife team of Irina Vorobieva and Igor Lisovsky. A crowd of 14,600 also saw the brother-sister pair of Peter and Kitty Carruthers, the U.S. champions, advance from seventh to fifth among the 11 teams.

The Carrutherses — after errors in Toesday night's short program, which counted for 28 percent of the final score — returned with an exciting five-minute long program that drew a standing ovation. The judges gave them scores averaging

U.S. women did well, ton, especially Elaine Zayak, a high school sophomore from Paramus, N.J. In her first appearance in these five-day championships, she finished pulsory figures — seventh of 31 contestants — to stay in the running for the title.

The men's and women's singles are spread over three days — com-pulsory figures on morning No. 1, short program on afternoon No. 2 and free skating on evening No. 3. The compulsories count 30 percent, short program 20 percent and free skating 50 percent of the final

Before the women's three com-pulsory figures, Zayak said she would be happy to finish in the top seven. She normally does better in the short, in which she has one triple jump, and the free skating, in which her seven triple jumps in winning the U.S. otle three weeks ago caused a sensation in this somewhat staid sport. Claudia Kristofics-Binder of Austria led after the compulsory figures. Denise Biellmann of Switzerland, the overall favorite, ranked fourth. Priscilla Hill of the United States.

"You don't want to know about them," Zayak said of her compulsory figures, smiling. "Well, they weren't bad. Figures are difficult for me. Each level — novice, junior and senior — has different figures. They get tougher as you move up. I just started on these figures last lo Wednesday's two-minute short program, the judges scored each skater first oo the seven re-quired elements and then on pres-entation. Of Hamilton's 18 marks, one was a 5.9 (6 is perfect) and nine were 5.8's.

Santee's best marks were seven 5.8s as he finished third for the program. Simond finished fifth for the program and fell to second overall; he is not expected to be the equal of Santee and Hamilton in the five-minute free skating.

"I see it being between me and Scotty for the gold," said Samee, the silver medalist at the U.S. Nationals. "My goal has always been to be world champion and I'm exactly in the position I want to be. I was second going into the free skating at the Worlds last year, but 1 knew 1 had nn shot with Robin Cousins right behind me."

"We're both fighting for the same thing." said Hamilton.

"We're both capable of doing the same thing. He's been established for a long time and I've been trying to catch up. I just want my 5.9 and standing ovadon. That's my goal."

Chicago Is Bullish on Chips-Down Theus

By Sam Goldaper

New York Times Service NEW YORK - The Chicago Bulls did not waste any time finding out what Reggie Theus, their rookie guard and first-round draft choice, was made of, and Theus wasted little time in showing them.

Theus kept up the good work in Wednesday night's 111-100 tri-umph over the 76ers in Philadel-phia. He hit five floor shots and converted 16 of 18 from the foul line for a game-high total of 26

Before the arrival of Theus, who is 6 feet 7 inches tall, Chicago fans were accustomed to a plodding, slow-moving team with small guards feeding the ball to a big, strong front line. For years the Bulls neither scored nor gave up many points.

Theus's run-and-gun play — something he was schooled in at Nevada-Las Vegas, which led the nation in scoting his last college

Wrinkles on TV

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — The faces of IN television newswomen are never wrinkled. Not like the reliable faces of Walter Cronkite and Morley Safer. The faces of television newswomen always seem to have arrived fresh from the presser two seconds ahead of the camera.

Several years ago, to be sure, an with a wriokled face on the

After that, news could be emitted from women only if they were unwrinkled. It also helped to be blond and to have a name like Portia or Melanie.

Good, upright, old-fashioned names like Walter and Dan and John and Frank were all right for television newsmen to go by, but good, upright, old-fashioned women's names like Mabei and Gertie were not accorded equal opportu-

No Mabels were allowed to stand under the spreading White House elms at twilight and say. Meanwhile, the presidency continued as usual today . .

How this was decided I cannot say for sure. My guess is that when it was proposed some vital executive said: "Mabel! You want to have a woman named Mabel standing under those beautiful White House elms?"

Nor can I say with certainty why Portia and Melanie had to be blond, Cronkite isn't blond, Chancellor isn't blond. Blond newsmen. in fact, were so rare that you might have suspected the television oews industry of systematically discriminating against blond men. Perhaps this is why Portia and Melanie had to be blond. Maybe a vital executive went to a Scandinaviao restau rant one night and came out with a nightmare.

Maybe, as a result, he called a meeting next day and said. "If we don't get some blonds on the work force we're going to have the federal equal-opportunity people climb-iog all over our kidneys about the lack of yellow hair on the payroll."

The question which I am ap-proaching is whether any woman in television news can some day reach the eminence enjoyed for so long hy Walter Cronkite. It will be mighty difficult until some vital executive of the female sex replaces the present boss.

This great female executive might come from the present crop blond, unwrinkled Portias and Melanies. Uoder the present management they probably have a short expectancy of life on eamera. thanks to the merciless inevitability with which life turns blond to gray and wears ruts in the human

Despite their unfair advantages in the present labor market, these women on the whole strike me as reasonably competent; which is to say, competent enough to rise to the top of the executive ladder once they are told their hair oo longer goes well with the White House elms.

When one of them does, I suspect, bitter memory will compel her to stride into the boardroom one day and say, "It's time we had some wrinkled women on this network. People can't really believe news when it issues from an unwrinkled face."

Maybe she will discover a nice. old wrinkled face in the research department. A Melanie who was filed away there years ago when her jowls began to show, I see this Melanie being offered the top joh. The big, big Cronkite joh, and like Cronkite she is beyond trying to deceive anyone.

Ravi Shankar

Despite Beatles, Hippies and Freaks, The Music I Play Is Classical'

By Michael Zwerin nal Herold Tribune

PARIS — Ravi Shankar was the teacher of George Harrison. John Coltrane and Yehudi Menubin. He taught Indian music to the West. It is hard not to call him a guru, though be says the word with hesitation, as if afraid to distort it as his music was once distorted.

"Being George Harrison's you might say - guru was good and bad at the same time," he said, "Good because Indian music was discovered by young people. And bad because most of those people did not realize the seriousness of our music.

Shankar came to the West for the first time in 1932, at the age of 12, with his brother Uday's folklore troupe. He danced and played flute, bowed instruments and sitar. They came again in 1934, 1936 and 1938. Shankar went on to perform Indian classical music in the great Western concert halls. He had met Casals, Segovia, Heifetz, Paderewski and Toscanini before being intro-duced to Harrison at a London party in the late '60s, and he wants once and for all to erase the hippy image he acquired. "I would like to make it very clear that the music I play is Indian classical music. It goes hack

2,500 years. It is serious music." Lessons for Harrison

When Shankar met Harrison he did not know who The Beatles were. He had been told they were very popular, but he had not heard of Harrison's sitar playing on their hit, "Norwegian Wood." Harrison took three lessons in London and then studied with Shankar for six weeks in India until "he saw how difficult it is. You know, he meant well." Shankar speaks slowly, repeating key phrases with precision. "All of those young people did not understand the seriousness of our music. They thought that to go and hear Ravi Shankar you must be high as a kite. It is a superficial approach. It does not go with our music. You must listen with a clear mind and respectful attitude, 'Attitude' is the word

"Freaks were freaking-out and dancing in the audience. The things I have seen, the things I could tell you. I made speeches asking people to sit properly and not to smoke, neck with their girlfriends or sip beer. That does not go with our music. You don't do that with Bach. Some of them listened to me hut most - what's the word you use? - copped

Yet he knew no other Indian musician could reach such a wide and young audience. He felt a cultural responsibility, while at home he was being, as he phrases "put down" for sacrilege and eommereialism. Often he stopped playing in mid-concert and walked off the stage. He told the rock audiences that Indian music should be a spiritual experience. "We have to be clean in mind and body while we play and we can only improvise when our minds are happy and under control."

Indian classical music is based on ragas and talas. There are thousands of ragas, melodic forms that relate to seasons. times of day, festivals of one kind or another. Talas are rhythmic cycles, from three to 108 beats in length. The music is oot written, it is handed down orally and keeps developing. After years of training the musician begins to improvise, the degree of improvisation depending on his ability. Shankar says he improvises up to 95 percent of the time. The Indian scale has 12 semitones, like the Western octave, hut there are 10 extra microtones, used as a pulse and bent much like hive notes in jazz and

One raga can go oo for hours without modulations, often monotocous to Western ears. One reason for Shankar's success in the West, but drawing criticism at home, is that he shortened them, played three or four ragas during a two-hour concert, al-though he says he has accustomed audiences to the Indian sound and now plays here almost the way he does in India.
